

The "Devil."

Who comes to the printshop with learned air,
With clean-washed face and parted hair,
And applies for a job, of the
"manajair?" The "devil."

Who, when his task is at last assigned,
Of cleaning type a "Jonah" does find
And wants a job of another kind?
The "devil."

Who, when at last he has some grit,
For setting type he is surely fit,
And vainly imagines "I am IT?"
The "devil."

Who makes the fires and brings
the wood,
Does a thousand chores that are just as good,
And just as well as others could?
The "devil."

Who gets his face all smeared
with ink,
And of mischievous things does often think?
Whose money (he has none)
never gets "kerchink?"
The "devil."

Who for more knowledge does often seek?
Who gets his head skinned twice
a week,
And when he's older a drunk
does seek?
The "devil."

Who helps the editor put up a fight
And gets his eyes blacked—left and right—
Never says his prayers, day nor night?
The "devil."

Who puts a pin on the editor's chair
And makes him climb the very air,
And sings, "I'll meet you over there?"
The "devil."

Who makes the preachers laugh
and grin,
And school teachers take their signs all in?
Who makes the world go 'round and spin?
The "devil."

The world does freely go for him,
He's truly suited for every whim,
And when he's gone we'll mourn
for him—
The "devil."

To blissful heaven he will surely go,
And the trip he'll make will not be slow—
All printers get a free pass (?)
you know—
This includes the "devil."

PUBLIC OPINION.

(Philadelphia Press.)

Senator Cummins, an early and original progressive, has taken a stand against a third party movement. Senator La Follette, it is declared, also will make known very shortly that he too proposes to remain a Republican. Sen.ators Works, of California; Jones, of Washington; Kenyon, of Iowa; Brown, of Nebraska, and Grona, of North Dakota, are supporters of Roosevelt for the nomination, decline to join with him in a movement intended to defeat the Republican party. If Roosevelt had heard from the people before he decided to bolt he ought to let this message be known. Most of his associates do not seem to have heard the same news.

Some of them, indeed, are waiting for more light and refuse to decide for or against a bolt until they have heard from home. The movement should, indeed, have one good effect in compelling Roosevelt men who have been made Republican electors to vote the Republican ticket or join the bolters openly. Otherwise their treachery and double-dealing would be too odious to be tolerated in any quarters.

The bolt is not merely factional, but personal. Its object is to put Roosevelt in nomination for the presidency. Colonel Roosevelt has won many distinctions. If nominated in August as proposed he will have the additional distinction of being the first man in the history of American politics who being beaten for nomination at the national convention of his party, refused to abide by the result and headed a movement to defeat his own party.

An Aggressive Campaign.

Every day that passes witnesses the strengthening of the forces of the Republican party. This progress of the destinies of Mr. Taft to the conclusion of success it is believed will continue with accelerated pace as the campaign develops. The reaction of the country from radicalism is everywhere apparent. The men who stand for the overthrow of the foundations of the country's prosperity are losing influence with the masses of the people. The fact there are two candidates in the field who represent only panaceas, and each of them is preparing to exploit his wares with the vociferousness of an Indian nostrum vendor has had the effect of alienating great masses of the thinking voters. Had Roosevelt and Wilson come into some form of agreement, pooling their interests in any manner indicative of mutual confidence in the theories they advance, the effect would have been to convince their unstable followings that they might count with assurance upon the progress of radicalism in a definite direction. As the matter stands, the radical positions and undefined and inharmonious, as proposed by the other two leaders of the radical parties. They are in need of clarifying, and lacking the ability to give them clearness Roosevelt has simply reiterated his cry of stealing from the people. Wilson seems to be as devoid of resourcefulness in initiative. His platform is a plain straddle upon every important subject and lacks the ringing earnestness of vision and inspiration. There is no substance in it for a really successful exploitation of radical positions. It is simply Democratic hodgepodge. Buncombe is the essence of its phraseology.

The third party advocate sees that he must play the part of a paratire in order to make anything like a respectable showing. He sees that it is up to him, so to speak, to break up the Democratic party, if, his scheme of having the old parties divided into radical and progressive shall prevail. He perceives that it is only through the faculty of being a first-class trouble maker and a spoiler that he can save himself from being utterly submerged. Hence the real prop of Roosevelt will be Wilson and not Taft. The President has a position. He has a party. He has a record. He has a history behind him. He has the industries of the country for his support. He has the wageworker on his side. Despite the rising prices that go along with prosperity the wage-worker is better clothed and housed than ever before in his life. The farmer is with the President. He has his farm cleared of mortgages and is reaping in the best range of prices for his produce ever received in the history of American agriculture.

The Republican party is in the mood and has the opportunity for an aggressive campaign. It will reap simply by the thousands the votes that Roosevelt and Wilson will fail to secure through their divisions, and the advertisement thereby of the unstable and untenable nature of purely radical propositions and parties. Democrats and Republicans alike who stand for the conservation of capital will vote for Taft. They only need to have displayed to them the fact that the Republicans by an aggressive campaign are bent upon safeguarding industry. The wage-workers looking to the operation of the manufactures of the nation for their continued employment will shy away from the man who wants to bring free trade havoc among them—the theoretic Wilson—and they will equally shy away from the man who confesses he knows nothing about the tariff—the impulsive Roosevelt. The wageworker wants work. He does not want rain-bows. He wants continued employment at a living wage. He does not want an empty dinner pail begirt with radical ribbons. Capital and labor were never closer and the general economy of the country was never so well fitted to the betterment of the social state of the masses of the people. Every improvement in industrial processes, every great invention in the field of production tends to greatly increase the volume of popular wealth, even though these things inure to the good of their exploiters.

With the farmers and the wageworkers contented and with capital bent upon protecting the sources of earning the field for a campaign of discontent cannot be regarded as hopeful. The Republican party however, may not rest upon the increments to their strength from the impossible positions of their opponents. They must work like beavers and speak out with confidence and further the process of disintegration of radicalism that is already going on. Taft and effective nationalism must win the day.

OUR TICKET.

For President:
 William Howard Taft.
 For Vice President:
 James S. Sherman.

Don't peddle your troubles—nobody cares to hear them.

Don't expect to sell your stuff without advertising. This is nothing if not an advertising age.

Why brood over your troubles? Any old hen will tell you that it will only hatch more.

A woman always feels proud of her husband if she thinks that some day he will make more money.

Concerning Geography, "And were you born in India?" "I was." "What part?" "All of me of course."

Every man should give up something to his wife and usually does—his salary.

Love rules the world but woman rules the men.

Ryan Loves Democrats.

Thos. Fortune Ryan declared: "I like them all," meaning democrats. Stop a moment and think it was this same Ryan who William Jennings Bryan tried to have fired, put out and kicked out of the Fifth Regiment Armory as a man who was a disgrace to the party, a stench in the nostril of every true follower of Jackson. And yet Mr. Ryan says "I love you too, William Jennings, although you treat me like a dog I still like you." And the reason, is what stifies us, because you are a democrat. Yes, Ryan loves Bryan, he loves Wilson, he loves them all. Ryan is rich is has stopped counting his money, but he is still in the game and when it comes to the division Ryan always gets his. For every dollar Mr. Ryan puts into a campaign he wants two in return or many more in and wants them quick. So it is easy for a man of this type to love. But that his love is not desired is generally understood.

High Cost of Living.

That the high cost of living will be one of the chief political arguments by the Democrats and perhaps the third party is already evidenced. The chief end of this of course will be a view of entering the White House, and to this end it is the business of the outs to pillory the ins and to convince as many thoughtless people as possible that their fallacies are facts.

That the high cost of living is an issue is not denied and that the Republican party is as anxious to make the cost of living as cheap as possible can not be denied. But the intelligent man will not be fooled by the promise of the politician to cut the grocery bill in twain. Why? Because he well knows that such promises are as futile as they are insincere. The truth is the average person is unwilling to place the high cost of living where it justly belongs, and that is with himself.

There are to be sure, economic factors entering into consideration and something to be expected of tariff revision that keeps in mind the protection of home industry and of the regulation of trusts as entered upon by President Taft; but for the most part the growing expense of our daily life are due to personal extravagance or the gratification of luxurious taste, and humane nature choose to place the responsibility elsewhere.

We live in better homes than our forefathers; sons and daughters are raised with an appetite for luxury; the young folks who wed must begin where their parents left off; whereas his father got along with a common school education, the son must be sent to college; when we travel it must be in a Pullman; we stop at the best hotels, and the hotels are constantly becoming more expensive to meet the growing taste for luxuries; we patronize the most gilded places of amusement; we must dress as well as our neighbors, and our neighbors feel they must dress a little better than us; the round steak has become a tenderloin; the cotton stocking a silk one; the one-horse shay an automobile; the pipe a fragrant Havana; the water of the well has turned to wine, and the quick-lunch counter a lobster palace—and yet we complain of the high cost of living!

The truth is, this generation is having the time of its life, but let's be reasonable and philosophical about it. As a people we have grown in grace, and if we insist upon better homes, better education for our children, more wholesome pleasure and recreation and plenty of it, it is a sign of higher mental attainment, of growing capacity to obtain and enjoy and of expanding ambitions.

It is probably a sin of the times that too many homes are living beyond their incomes; but if economy is too painful to be practiced, then let there be no complaint when the piper presents his bill for services amidst the revels of extravagance. And when the politician amid his over anxiety to get to the White House flouts the tariff as being wholly responsible for the high cost of living, hold a level head and just remember, place the guilt where it belongs.

It will doubtless be necessary for us to have more to say on this subject before the campaign is over. But let it come, right like truth may be crushed but will rise again.

PUBLIC OPINION.

New York Tribune.
 If political horror were universal all the followers of Colonel Roosevelt who have been nominated as electors by the Republican party either would pursue the course adopted by the Maryland elector who announces that he feels bound, if elected, to cast his vote for Mr. Taft in spite of his personal preferences or would withdraw from the ticket. Only these two courses are honorable. To remain on as Republicans, inviting the voters of Republicans, while intending to vote for the candidate of another party, is to perpetrate a fraud. It can have no other purpose than to disfranchise intending Republican voters, as specifically in Kansas, it is said, or to deceive them.

As this Maryland elector says, he was put on the ticket with the understanding that he would support the Republican candidate for president to be chosen at the Republican National Convention, whoever he might be. That is the tacit understanding with every elector chosen. To carry it out has always been held to be a solemn obligation, so solemn that in all the history of the national elections since the party system and national conventions developed no elector has ever violated it.

The Colonel's followers have not produced a single argument to justify their course of nominating as Republican electors men who are not Republicans at all but who intend to vote against the Republican candidates for president and vice president. It is a steal, pure and simple, of the Republican party's name and place on the ballot.

Wilson's Boss Ban.

Banning the bosses and refusing to lure Tom Taggart, of Indiana, back into the committee, Woodrow Wilson has taken recourse to the palm-leaf fan and believes that in lotus blossom forgetfulness of all duties and exactions with regard to organization he can drift toward the White House in the bow of the white swan of fate. The so-called ban of the bosses only goes as far as the governor himself. His following will doubtless see to it that the bosses are active in the work of carrying states. It is fine to dream of a sure thing but it takes hustle to get it.

When it comes to pristine purity of the source of campaign funds those that will back the efforts of Mr. Taft to return to the White House will bear scrutiny with those employed either for the bull moose candidate or the academic candidate. When it comes to matters of organization Mr. Taft will have the best organization that has ever been behind a candidate, and it will do its work in the open. If the third party merges its organization into one, personality and if the Democratic party is content to let Wilson win on his own hook the outcome will be assured. The fact is that the talk of banning bosses is Democratic twaddle, and the need and importance of organization will be felt keenly by them as others. Never the less, the Taft forces are getting a fine lead in preparedness for the contest and will have much in their favor at the start.

TAFT WILL NOT STUMP COUNTRY

Washington, July 13.—President Taft will not take the stump or do any extensive campaigning in his own behalf this fall.

This statement was made at the white house today when the president declined the invitation of the board of managers of the Minnesota State Agricultural society to attend the Minnesota State fair the last week in September.

The telegram of invitation said in part: "The people of Minnesota and the northwest are eager to see you and personally listen to your views on the great issues of this campaign."

In declining to make any campaign trips the president has acquiesced in the opinion of his advisors, who always have contended it would be better for him to maintain the presidential dignity by remaining in Washington and issuing an occasional statement than to enter on an extended and heated series of arguments with his opponents.

It is thought the president may visit some of the larger Eastern cities for "one night stands" late in October, but he will do no more.

An invitation to attend the meeting of the general society of Mayflower descendants at Plymouth, Mass., on September 6th was declined today by the president.

The Lemon.

Few people know the value of lemon juice. A piece of lemon bound upon a corn will cure it in a few days; it should be renewed night and morning. The free use of lemon juice and sugar will relieve a cough. Most people feel poorly in the spring, but if they will eat a lemon every morning for a week with or without sugar as they like they will find it better than medicine. Lemon juice, used according to this recipe, will sometime cure consumption: Put a dozen lemons into cold water and slowly bring to a boil; boil slowly until the lemons are soft, then squeeze until all the juice exhausted; add sugar to your taste and drink in this way use a dozen lemons a day. If they cause pain and loosen the bowels too much, lessen the quantity and use only six a day until you are better; and then begin a dozen a day. After using five, or six dozen the patient will begin to gain flesh and enjoy food. Hold on to the lemons and still use them freely for several weeks more. Another use for lemons is for refreshing drink in summer, or in sickness at any time. Prepare it as above directed and add water and sugar. But in order to have this keep well, after boiling the lemons squeeze and strain carefully; then to every pint of juice add one pound of crushed sugar; boil, and stir a few minutes more until the sugar is dissolved, skim carefully and bottle. You will get more juice from the lemons by boiling them and the preparation keeps better.—San Francisco Chronicle.

This speaks for itself: "Dawson, Ga., June 25.—Mrs. Lou Johnson, an elderly widow, living near here, was burned to death early today and her home was destroyed by fire. HILLES TO LEAD FIGHT FOR TAFT

Washington, July 9.—Mr. Charles P. Hilles, at present the private secretary to President Taft, was today unanimously elected chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Mr. James Reynolds, at present a member of the Tariff Board and formerly an assistant secretary of the Treasury, was elected secretary.

No better combination of men could have been chosen to manage President Taft's campaign. Mr. Hilles is a man of great executive ability and his long experience in the White House as President Taft's private secretary has made him thoroughly acquainted with the political situation in every state. Mr. Reynolds, before coming to Washington as an assistant secretary of the state central committee of Massachusetts and has therefore an intimate knowledge of practical politics, for nowhere is the game better played than in Massachusetts.

Any lack of intimate acquaintance with the most practical phases of the most practical politics from which Mr. Hilles may suffer at the beginning of his campaign will be supplied by his efficient assistant, Mr. Reynolds. Moreover, during his four years' service as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Mr. Reynolds was in charge of customs so that he gained a thorough knowledge of the working of the tariff laws, a knowledge that was further increased by his service on the Tariff Board. President Taft has decided to make the tariff the principal issue in the coming campaign, in that Mr. Reynolds's knowledge is of incalculable advantage to the party.

Mr. Hilles' choice this morning by the subcommittee of nine was a surprise. When the national convention adjourned in Chicago a few weeks ago it was generally understood that Mr. Hilles would manage the campaign. When the subcommittee met here yesterday morning it developed that Mr. Hilles was indifferent, though willing to serve as chairman if President Taft considered him the best man for the place. Last night Mr. Hilles was regarded as having declined to be considered.

The situation was very thoroughly discussed at the reception given by President Taft at the White House last night to the Republican leaders and congressmen in the city.

After midnight, when the guest had a conference lasting until nearly 3 o'clock this morning, with the members of the subcommittee. The situation was reviewed and each member of the committee expressed the opinion he had formed as the result of his interchanging of views with the guest of the evening. Several of the committee members favor the election of Mr. Barnes, claiming that he would conduct an aggressive campaign of endless hostility to Colonel Roosevelt and his friends in New York, because if his personal feeling in the matter. Other members of the committee believed that Mr. Barnes' personality would invite criticism and Mr. Hilles' name was again brought forward in spite of his objection.

At 9:30 o'clock this morning the committee met at the Willard Hotel and again went over the situation. When they visited Mr. Taft and White House, were they told him that they had agreed upon Mr. Hilles and that it was for him to obtain Mr. Hilles' consent. They returned Willard and soon after word was brought to them that Mr. Hilles had yielded to the President's solicitation. Thereupon the committee unanimously elected him chairman.

Mr. Reynolds was elected at the suggestion of senate Crane, of Massachusetts, the most astute manager in all the gathering of party leaders at the national convention in Chicago. Mr. Crane will look after New England, where there is assisted by Mr. Reynolds, upon whose judgment and skilful management in politics Mr. Crane has depended for many years.

The committee adjourned to meet in New York on July 19 a week from next Friday. Then it will choose a treasurer. Many names have been mentioned, among them John Hayes Hammond, of Washington; Charles G. Dawes, of Chicago; Otto Ban-nard, of New York; John Wannamaker, of Philadelphia and David R. Forgan, of Chicago. At that time the committee will also select the executive committee advisory committee.

This advisory committee will consist probably of five members, and each member will take charge of one of the battle ground into which the debatable counter Crane will charge of new England and similarly there will be one state, all of them acting under the general direction of Mr. Hilles. The general will be in New York but there will also be headquarters in Chicago and a well equipped initial bureau will be established on the Pacific Coast, probably at San Francisco, to manage the campaign in the far West.

With the election of Messrs. Hilles and Reynolds the executive board of the National Committee is now complete, Sergeant-at-Arms William F. Stone having been unanimously re-elected at Chicago by the full committee. The trio is a congenial one and will work in harmony. They are personal friends, having known one another many years.

The relations between Secretary Hilles and the Collector have been very close and confidential and they entertain a warm regard for each other. Mr. Reynolds and the Collector are like brothers. Their friendship began when Mr. Reynolds was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and his duties included jurisdiction over the Customs Service.

Upon the executive board will depend the management of the campaign, and hence they are not enjoying sinecures. In 1904 and 1908 the sergeant-at-arms, who, by virtue of his office, is in actual charge of headquarters, was excused from taking any part in the management, but it is more than probable that his services will be needed this time.

President Taft has decided that the pledge of the Republican platform to revise the tariff after scientific study of all conditions involved in each industry shall be the battle cry of the night.

It is assumed that the Democrats will make the tariff their issue, and the wise men in Governor Wilson's camp are undoubtedly already busy trying to square their candidate's free trade declarations with the "tariff for revenue" pledge of the platform. Colonel Roosevelt will doubtless howl about the tariff as cheerfully as he can about any other subject which he regards as a profitable issue for the moment, so that the tariff will be the principal topic of discussion until next November.

While no program has yet been mapped out it is the present belief that neither President Taft nor Governor Wilson will rival Colonel Roosevelt's program of barnstorming. President Taft will prepare many addresses which will be delivered on occasions judiciously selected. He will speak either at Beverly or at Washington before audiences that will be representative. So, too, Governor Wilson expects at present to deliver most of his addresses at his own home. The circus element of the campaign will be the congenial and exclusive right of Colonel Roosevelt. He will doubtless dash all over the country in characteristic fashion, entertaining the thoughtless and stirring up class hatred and prejudice until in the end he will overreach himself and the thoughtful voters of this country, anxious for the preservation of its institutions and confident of President Taft's devotion to orderly progress, will again cast their ballot for him.

Mr. Hilles issued a statement tonight declaring the confidence of the Republican party in its cause and its candidates. It follows:

"The Republican party approaches the presidential campaign with confidence in the solemnity of its cause and in the integrity and ability of the candidates who represent that cause. Progress with order is good doctrine for the Republican party today, as it has been since the day of its birth.

"Real progress is not a theory, but an achievement. No American citizen should be deceived into an exchange of his birthright for a vision. The progress of the nation toward better things does not come from declamation, but from actual result. More has been accomplished in the last three years under the administration of President Taft than was ever before accomplished by an American president in the same period of time.

"A distinct line of demarcation between the Republican party and the Democratic party is revealed in the platforms adopted at Chicago and Baltimore. One is an earnest of future progress through a record of achievement; the other is a promise containing a denial of the good that has been done.

"Upon the solid rock of the rights of the individual as granted by the Constitution the Republican party builds its structure of optimism. The Democratic party, on the other hand, in the opening sentence of its address to the electorate, betrays its recessional quality by denying the right of Congress, a right again and again confirmed by the Supreme Court, to establish protective duties for the benefit of American industries. It declares as false the vital issue of the constitutional liberties of the individual. Since liberties are now assailed by those who advocate the overthrow of the independence of the judiciary. It would have the individual defenseless in the protection of those rights declared inalienable under the Constitution."
