THE BOYS' CORN CLUB.

Having an engagement to see our worthy Superintendent of school on special business 23rd inst, he gave me a very cordial invitation to attend the meeting of the boys corn club of Alamance County. I went, I saw, I heard, and was fully convinced that some of our farmers boys are not only engaged in, but greatly interested in a good and great work. Sixteen of the thirty-nine boys whose names are enrolled on the boy's corn club list, were present and each one received a prize for his yield of corn this year from one specially prepared acre of land. The first prize for the greatest yield which was about sixty-five bushels, was awarded to Mr. Grant McBane's son. The second prize went to Mr. Len Homewood and the third I believe, to Mr. Royzelle Hornaday. The smallest boy was the son of Mr. J. C. McAdams of Elon College. I would judge the boy to be about twelve years old. He read from written manuscript to me that of preparing and cultivating his acre of corn, which was very interesting and merited applause. Hon. R. W. Scott had two sons in the contest, each of whom received a prize. Mr. Scott made an excellent talk to the boys. It was practical and chock full of good sense all the way through except when he seemingly tried to throw off on his good wife just a little by saying 'She was inclined to follow the fashions of the day a little beyond his judgment of the limit line, and by referring to her dislike to geese, but said she finally withdrew her objections and endorsed his original ideas of the goose question. Now I do not like to take issue with my friend Scott but my opinion is that Mrs. Scott had some trouble with that feathery tribe and had a perfect right to object to the trespassing characteristics of those geese, especially when they assumed the privilege of visiting her garden. I remember some very excellent articles she wrote for the Progressive Farmers, especially the one about her garden how she managed to get her plans carried out in detail and the results that followed. I won't tell any more on my friend Scott this time. But if I ever hear him attempt to go back on woman—any woman even just a little, I shall wade right in and tell the whole story. He said woman suffrage was certainly coming but hoped he would be away when she (it) came. He made one statement that was especially interesting to me. He said he raised goats and found them to be profitable, but also found it difficult to sell goat meat at any of the meat markets without representing it as mutton, and rather than do this he decided he would build up a home market which he found to be profitable. My friend has six or eight boys and perhaps an equal number of good looking girls and that is why he, in a jocular vein, said he had a home market for about all he could not sell. I almost envy my friend. If I had fifteen or twenty healthy boys and about the same number of healthy good looking girls, boys and girls ranging in age from one to twenty years, it would be a perfect delight to me to live on the farm, and every boy would become a member of the corn club as soon as he got old enough and every girl a member of the tomato club. The best part of it all would be the quantities of good rations we would have to eat at home, and and sell only what we did not want to eat. If I had as big an office as that I would never go on the huskings again, scrapping with an opponent for anything. My friend Scott is not only a model farmer but a model man in many respects. If every young man could fully imbibe his practical ideas of making life worthwhile while there would not be as many bachelor men and bachelor maids as there are in the country, and when two became one they would not be content always to remain one. But I started out tell something about the boy's corn club and got off on a side line not very pertinent to the question, and shall have to leave it to some one else to tell the real corn story. My friend Johnson got my mind off the subject a little by saying he had strange suspicions about my attending that corn club meeting and thought perhaps my object was to try to put up the price of corn. But I tried to convince him that it was not my business to try to put up the price of anything right now. He asked some of the queerest questions you ever heard. He ought not to bother me when I go to town. I shall not refer to any more of his peculiar questions until after he eats his Thanksgiving dinner and may be he will quiet down after that. Now he caused all this depression and I shall have to get back to my original subject the best way I can. I want to say that the corn club business embraced progressive ideas all right; and if the boys keep on like they have started it will not be many years until we will have a large number of progressive practical farmers in this county. And our pretty girls what about them—our tomato club girls? Why were they not at the meeting and why did they not get their prizes the same time the boys got theirs. The meeting of the girl's tomato club was held some weeks ago when their prizes were awarded. I believe in the co-educational, the co-working and also the co-enjoyment ideas. And when you have any good things to hand out, pass them around to the girls and boys alike and of course, when it becomes necessary to show a preference the girl should have it in most cases. All honor to the boys and girls who are engaged in such a good work. Chain gangs and jails do not get their recruits from the boys who take on interest in honest work, neither do drunkard and cigarette friends come from that class of boys. Mr. Ed. Turner's speech to the corn club boys was very practical with reference to preparing the land—especially the seed bed—and cultivating the corn. Mr. H. M. Cates' speech of presentation of prizes was interesting lively and impressive. I have to enter my strong protest against something he said about Alamance County but have not time to refer to them now. Existing conditions wont bear him out in making this birth place of civil liberty as good a place as he respresented it to be. Mr. Schanb's speech was practical and helpful to the boys. He emphasized the importance of reducing the cost of growing a bushel of corn as well as increasing the yield in bushels per acre. Superintendent Robertson gave the boys some words of encouragement, and insisted on a strict adherence to the rules by which each member of the corn club is expected to be governed. I have a great mind to tell what my friend Robertson said about that fellow who did not get his sympathy on time—too short a notice for him to go to church that day. But since there is yet one more month in this good leap year, which usually along a certain line, is the most fruitful of all the twelve, I shall not tell it; besides he has the advantage right now and I have to lie low four or five months anyway. J. W. A. Thompson.

Often the hunt for a rich wife ends when the man meets a woman that uses Electric Bitters. Her strong nerves tell in a bright brain and even temper. Wilson's Dilemma.

Of course the many important duties pertaining to the office of President of the United States makes that position much honored under the most favorable circumstances' but the President-elect Wilson will find a peculiarly complex condition of affairs confronting him when he sets foot in the White House next March.

In the first place, it is unquestionable conceded that he got the nomination of his party through the mighty power and influence of William Jennings Bryan, and as a matter of course Bryan is going to feel that Wilson should continue to recognize obligations to him and follow his advice in all matters of Governmental policy. Bryan was the dominant figure in the convention, dictating the platform, and gave direction to the campaign. In each of his unsuccessful runs for the presidency he polled more popular votes than Wilson received when he was elected. So, naturally, Bryan expects to keep the ear of the President throughout the term and shape the legislation of the National Congress.

On the other hand, there are Speaker Clark and Oscar W. Underwood. Mr. Clark justly charges that Bryan blighted his chances for the nomination, and Underwood cannot have so soon forgotten that Bryan accused him of infidelity to his party. Surely Clark and Underwood will most bitterly resent the idea of Mr. Bryan's acting as political guardian for the President while the former is not even officially connected with the administration. Clark and Underwood will be members of the President's political household, and they will oppose the dictation of an outsider who is not in sympathy with them. This situation will present to the President a most perplexing problem--one which he cannot possibly solve with a tolerable degree of satisfaction to all concerned.

Then there are the "Spoils of War," amounting to $33, 000, 000, to be distributed in 11,000 notwithstanding fourth class postmasters; and there are countless thousands of office-hungry Democrats crowding to the pie-counter, as famished men rush to a feast. Not more than one in five thousand will "land his job," and the defeated "bone-hunters" will raise a howl, beside which the lamentations of Jeremiah will pale into insignificance. These disgruntled "outs" and their friends will attempt to wreck vengeance on Wilson and his administration in some way; for every Democrat is by temperament an office-lover, and to be turned away from the pie-counter empty-handed while others are getting fat jobs invariably drives a Democrat to desperation and political crime. There are not near enough jobs the trouble for the new President.

Moreover, President Wilson will have to deal with a new party hopelessly divided, not alone in leadership, but also in both principle and policy. There is a great conservative element in the Democrat Party, and this element will oppose the destruction of the protective tariff. They have mildly opposed the calling of an extra session of Congress, and they have to be reckoned with when that session convenes. They are honest enough to admit that they are afraid of their own platform. They argue that the American people are now enjoying a period of prosperity and peace and that it is well enough to let well enough alone. They hark back to the dark days of Cleveland and the Wilson-Gorman free trade regime. They are going to oppose the radical or Bryan Democrats at every turn, and this is the darkest cloud on the Wilson horizon. These factions are as irreconcilable as darkness and light. If he listens to Bryan and follows the radical wing of his party he will precipitate a most disastrous business panic; and if on the other hand, he turns his back on the party platform and heeds the advice of the conservative wing of his party he will lay himself open to the charge of party perfidy and political dishonor. If he avoids the Scylla of radicalism he will fall into the Charibdis of party infidelity.

Therefore we say that the new President will enter upon a herculean task on March 4th, and that he is in a dilemma, from which no human wisdom, tact or diplomacy can serve to extricate him. Well may he retire to the tranquil island of Bermuda to meditate upon the ordeal through which he must pass as best he can; but, no matter which horn of the dilemma he decides to take, he must lead his party to certain defeat.

Our Plan.

In our last issue, we intended to give our plans for a three hundred thousand dollar bond issue for sand clay roads in Alamance County, but for some reason the "Devil" took the outline of our plans from the desk without our knowledge and placed it for reading matter, which it did not make consequently we fear that such a blunder has defeated the object of our plan. What we intended to say was this: Vote an issue of $300, 000.00 dollars fifty years, five per cent bonds, non taxable to Alamance County citizens. Let the work to our own people, provided the price is reasonable, and we believe it will be lower than outside contractors, and provided farther that they will take pay in this issue of bonds. Employ a local civil engineer to do all surveying and to see that the grade is cut to the survey. When the road is properly graded the work of the putting on of the sand can be done under the supervision of a competent road superintendent. This plan will remove the cause for employing engineers that have the greatest name, to waste our funds as was done in many places in the spending of the two hundred thousand dollars in the building of what Macadam roads we have, and also remove the opportunity for graft between contractor and engineer. Burlington and Alamance County has taken a sufficient course in this class of experimental work, the time has come when it must stop.

When the highway commission is selected to build these roads, select men who have plowed, cut sprouts by the day, built fence, dug ditches, made rails and moved dirt, in other words men who know what it takes to earn a dollar by the sweat of their brow, and you will have men that are experienced in the real duties of life rather than men who have

Select a local trust company as trustee for these bonds--its all folly to run nor for everything we use or buy. Let us make an effort here and now to be a resourceful and self-sustaining people.

The legitimate expenditure of this amount will build two hundred miles of road that will last just as long as the last stone that we built. And when the sand clay has washed away we still will have the grade that re-move the hills, and all that will be left of the macadam roads, the cost of the sand clay road is only one third that the macadam.

If this interests any one for the improvement of the roads named in last week's issue, let us hear from you.

BURLINGTON.

We have already made known our views on the present plan of city government for Burlington, but we are more impressed than ever with the seriousness of the situation when we hear some of the best business men of Burlington declare that the annual loss to the city, as result of careless, irresponsible management as the plan now affords, the sum seven thousand dollars or more annually. This same party did not leave us without hope, but named the same remedy, we have already suggested, and he further said that a commission form of government could not be secured without some diligent work on the part of the people that are really interested in the future success of Burlington.

Its folly to talk of selling the water and light system, for the sale means and increased rate to the consumer, and a profit to the owners. The thing to do is to decrease the cost of production and increase the sale rate to the consumer until the two meet, and if the plant is properly handled, the cost of production will be sufficiently decreased that the rate will not have to be increased very much.

We have property to the amount of two million five hundred thousand dollars listed for taxation in Burlington and its reflection upon our intelligence suppose that we can pay eight men twenty-four dollars a year each to run a business of this magnitude successfully, by giving their time for a few hours out of two nights in each month.

Here we are with a floating indebtedness of over forty thousand dollars and still on the increase. What shall we do about it? Just set still and "cuss" the board of Aldermen for following the brilliant example of their predecessors. This problem is up to the property owners of Burlington in a real stiff manner, and its a matter that must be taken hold of by the head and not by the tail, if we ever hope to stem the swelling tide of disaster. The question is will the city act in the Legislature or wait until two more years, pass swiftly bye.

Military Men To Carry On A Store.

Washington, Dec. 1 -- A co-operative store for the members of the army, navy, marine corps, national guard and revenue cutter service will be opened in Washington tomorrow. Already 1000 subscribers have been obtained to the effort to reduce the high cost of living. The establishment is the kind to be opened in the United States for members of the of the services named. At first only uniforms furnishings and equipment will be sold, but it is planned to deal eventually in all sorts of wares.

Football coach, Haughton of Harvard, receiving $10,000 a year wonder if he condescends to associate with the $2,000 professors?

The free American people, unshackled from all party affiliations have declared themselves, and that declaration has been heard from coast to coast. He alone who votes for what he sincerely believes to be for the best interest of his country is a patriot of the most noble type, regardless of the party for which he casts his ballot; but he who votes for the party only, and wholly ignores the interest of his country, is a slave of the voluntary type.

It is for us to see that our country stands firmly and we should therefore, rather sacrifice our party than our country--the model country of the entire world. I loved my party much, but I love my country more. Six Bull Moose preserves were established last Tuesday in the United States and we, Pennsylvania can be proud to lay first claim on the Keystone state, the signal state of all great movements, the movements for humanity.

Chapel Hill Item.
Of extraordinary interest to North Carolinians each year is the annual report of the Registrar of the University of North Carolina setting forth a general statistical survey of the 800 or more students of the institution with reference to the counties that they largely represent the per cent of students from the State, occupations of the parents of the students, and the religious affiliations of the students, etc. The total enrollment in all departments for the session of 1912-1913 is 816, only 52 of this number coming from other States and counties. The State of Florida contributes 13 to this list, and far-off Persia sends 2 students to this institution. The remaining 40 from foreign territory hail from scattering districts of the country, embracing a wide scope of territory from the State of New York to the Lone Star State. Relative to the representation from the various counties in this State sending in or more students to the University, are the following: Mecklenburg heads the list with the figures 38; Orange is a close second with 35; Guilford and Wayne counties tie for honors with 33 each; Johnston is next in rank with 27; Forsyth 23; Rowan 22; Wake 26; Robeson and Rockingham tie with 16 each; Durham 15; Alamance and Buncombe tie with 20 each; Beaufort and Davidson tie with 13 each; Iredell, New Hanover and Granville have 14 each; Union 15; Cleveland 11; Wilson 15; Edgecombe 12 and Cumberland 12. There are ten counties in the State unrepresented by any students this year. According to church affiliation the division of the student body is as follows: Methodist, 257; Baptist, 215; Presbyterian, 143; Episcopal 124; Christian 15; Hebrew 12; Lutheran 11; Moravian 8; Quakers 5; German Reformed 5; Disciple 3; Roman Catholic 3; Christian Science 2; Armenian 1; Saints Holiness 1, no church affiliations 9. The distribution according to the occupation or profession of the fathers of the students at the University is as follows: Farming 261, merchandise 166, law 55, medicine and survey 55, manufacturing 38, ministry 32, teaching 23, public service 10, railroad and shipping 18, banking 14, contracting 14, lumber dealing 14, mechanics 13, real estate 13, traveling 13, tobacco 10, book-keeping 7, brokerage 6, engineering 6, insurance 6, livery 6, printing 5, fishing 4, dentistry 3, architecture 2, chemistry 1, mining 1, photography 1, and tanning 1.
