

THE TWICE-A-WEEK DISPATCH

A PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICAN NEWSPAPER DEVOTED TO THE UPBUILDING OF AMERICAN HOMES AND AMERICAN INDUSTRIES.

BURLINGTON, ALAMANCE COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA, TUESDAY, JULY 28, 1914.

CAPTAIN E. S. PARKER DEAD

Died Yesterday (Monday) at His Home in Graham, After Years of Suffering.

Funeral 4.30 This Afternoon

A death that will cause intense sorrow throughout the entire State of North Carolina occurred in Graham yesterday afternoon at one o'clock when Capt. Edward S. Parker, of the well known legal firm of Parker & Parker, departed this life at the age of 76 years. He has lived in Alamance county most of his life, coming here in early manhood from Cumberland County.

He was a very prominent attorney, serving two years as solicitor in this judicial district, and has since that time had offices in Graham where he practiced law and enjoyed an excellent practice.

He served in the Confederate army and was promoted to the position of Captain.

About four years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis. Since that time he has suffered two other strokes.

Besides a wife, he leaves two sons, E. S. Parker, Jr., of Graham, and Junius Parker, of New York, and one daughter, Miss Mammie Parker, of Graham.

The funeral will be held this afternoon from the home in Graham, conducted by Rev. Mr. Parker, of Graham, a friend to the deceased, and the interment at Providence.

Quite a large number of floral designs were sent to the home by the friends of Captain Parker.

Will Ask President to Name Judge Long.

Washington, July 25.—Representative Doughton will take a delegation of North Carolinians to the White House early next week to ask the President to name Judge B. F. Long, of Statesville, to the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench. It has been definitely determined that the President will not appoint Judge Clark. Mr. Doughton will ask the entire delegation of the State, including Senators Simmons and Overman, to accompany him when he calls on the President in behalf of Judge Long.

Some interesting side-lights were brought out today in connection with Judge Clark's candidacy when it was stated at the White House that a copy of a statement made by Judge Clark in opposition to the President's oil policy had been laid before Mr. Wilson. It was also stated that the remarks Judge Clark is alleged to have made at one time to the effect that the Supreme Court was unconstitutional had been quietly placed before Mr. Wilson.

Judge Long is a brother to our County man, Hon. J. A. Long, a prominent attorney of Graham, and has many strong friends in this county as well as throughout the State.—Ed.)

Burlington 9; Graham 4.

Last Saturday afternoon at Piedmont Park Graham was defeated by the local team by a score of 9 to 4. The game was very interesting throughout and quite a number of people were there to see it.

The features of the game were the run by Thompson for Burlington; the first with two men on bases; and the home run of Hunter, for Graham in the ninth inning.

These teams play again Saturday afternoon at Piedmont Park, which the home team is confident will be another victory for Burlington.

Suppose that all the members of the manias club should stampee and go instituting damage suits!—Greensboro News.

"Bryan Betrayed Me and He Lied Me."

Washington, July 25.—The Baltimore convention was recalled to mind tonight when Speaker Champ Clark, in denying a report that he would support Roger Sullivan for the Senate in Illinois, declared that Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan not only lied on him but betrayed him at Baltimore. The speaker declares that Roger Sullivan betrayed him and says he sees no reason why he should support either Bryan or Sullivan.

"I have no interest and will have nothing to do with the Illinois senatorial campaign," said Speaker Clark. "Why should I support Sullivan. He and Bryan both betrayed me at Baltimore. Bryan lied about me and betrayed me. I don't know that Sullivan lied about me, but he betrayed me at the psychological moment. There is no reason why I should take a hand in any fight between Bryan and Sullivan."

Secretary Bryan, who is taking an active part in Illinois politics, is trying to defeat Roger Sullivan for the Senate. He has endorsed L. B. Stringer, a Progressive, or rather Bryan Democrat.

McREYNOLDS MAY GET PLACE

United States Attorney General May Get Supreme Court Judgeship by President Wilson.

Judge Clark Past Age Limit

Washington, July 25.—The President has not indicated who is to be named to succeed Justice Lurton on the Supreme Court bench, but the prediction is that he will offer it to Attorney General McReynolds. Members of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees believe that Mr. McReynolds is the promising man now. There are several reasons for this belief: First, Mr. McReynolds is considered fit for the position; he is an able, and fearless lawyer; second, he comes from Tennessee, the home of the late Judge Lurton, and third, the promotion of Mr. McReynolds would make room for another cabinet selection.

In the face of much prejudice Attorney General McReynolds has convinced the unbiased portion of the population of Washington that he is a real man, with backbone, and brains. The President is very fond of him, and has great faith in his ability to reach just and able conclusions, especially in a matter of law.

Were Judge Clark 10 years younger he might stand a show for the appointment. He would have to ally considerable opposition at home and convince the Senate that he did not mean some of the things he has said in speeches here and there about the country. It is reported here that somebody has informed Secretary Tumulty that Judge Clark opposed the repeal of the exemption clause of the Panama Canal Act, and in some speech made in Pennsylvania he declared that the Supreme Court is unconstitutional. Already opponents of Judge Clark are gathering rocks to throw at him. But being almost 68 years old bars Judge Clark from the Supreme Court bench.

A delegation of North Carolina attorneys will go to the White House Monday to try to get the President to forget the age limit fixed months ago by Attorney General McReynolds and himself against candidates for the Federal judgeships, and name the Chief Justice of North Carolina.

Some strong endorsements for Judge Clark have been filed at the White House. Secretary Bryan has promised to say what he thinks of Judge Clark if the President calls on him for his opinion of the North Carolinian, of whom he is very appreciative.

Senators Overman and Simmons have not yet endorsed Judge Clark in a formal way. They have tried to get the President to consider the age limit proposition, so that Judge Clark can get in the race.

Traveling Man Missing.

Greensboro, July 25.—S. T. Morris, of this city, is anxious to learn the whereabouts of Charles C. Albright, formerly a traveling salesman located here. Albright left his thirteen-year old son with Mr. Morris to board with him several months ago. Once since that time he met Albright on the street and he paid Mr. Morris $25 on account. Since that time he has seen nothing of him, and cannot get any information as to where he has gone. He has asked the authorities what to do with the child, and they advise him to send the boy to the county home. Mr. Morris is adverse to doing this.

NEW YORK FASHION LETTER

The Clever Use of Scallops and Points—The Vogue for Bias Bindings.

The Reign Of Stripes

New York, July 25.—The Directorate influence is waning. Straight hanging gowns with long slashes and funny flares seemed to be about to take the world by storm. The directive period has clung to tailored suits, leaving its imprint upon them, tossed a few bales of striped materials and departed, as the Westerner said of a horse thief, "for parts unknown." As stripes are rather trying to the slender woman, who predominates, the stripes are combined with plain colors, producing wonderfully attractive gowns. Thus we sometimes see the tunics of striped and sometimes the underskirt, sometimes an underwaist and sometimes the overwaist. It is the clever use of these stripes which suggested my illustration for this letter.

Awning striped ratins makes the lower skirt section and the sleeves of the waist. Plain ratine is used for the overbust and fitted circular tunic. In the front of the lower skirt is an inverted pleat which adds width and comfort in walking.

In the Spring the French hand-made waists were made with the edge scalloped down the front and bound with a bias fold of the same material as the waist. Now has come the fashion of cutting the bottoms of tunics and skirts in scallops, points or squares and binding them either with the same material or with a woven band. This is unusual and strikingly smart. It is also a thing not hard for the amateur dressmaker to do if she wishes. It takes time to taste and to stitch carefully, but no great skill.

A wonderfully stylish gown which I have just seen was made of black taffeta. The bodice was of the long-waisted type, too closely fitted to be moyen age, yet not quite a basque. The skirt was made with a long tunic, which seemed to be attached to the bottom of the waist. The tunic was scalloped around the bottom in large shallow scallops bound with the bias taffeta. The V-shaped neck and the waist was low with a large collar of saucer linen cut in scallops to match those on the skirt and edged with Valenciennes lace.

A wonderful evening wrap was of rich green lined with a most exquisite shade of cyclamen pink. From a large flared shoulder-yoke of braided broadcloth hung two flounces of the green, one to about three-quarters length and the other hanging to just below the waist. Both of these flounces are cut in deep Van Dyke points, lined with the pink satin and bound with braid to match the green broadcloth. Each time the wearer moves the points ripple, showing the exquisite coloring of the lining and reminding one of a dark cloud with a rosy lining.

Black velvet of the light feather-weight is the season's fad, and it is safe to say one which will last well into the Fall. Made into cunning little coatees and saucy little capes, sashes and girdles, it promises to gain in favor until the entire costume of velvet will be the rage.

Voile is such a practical fabric that it has largely taken the place of sheer lawns and organdies for the serviceable and dressy frocks. A very charming little dress of black-and-white striped voile has a straight hanging skirt gathered to a high waistline worn with surplice, sash blouse having long, tight-fitting sleeves of white voile. The effect of this blouse is exquisitely soft and the fulness instead of blousing fits the figure in soft

ROSCOE MITCHELL RESIGNS

As Correspondent for Hearst's Papers He Would Not Hold Place if He Couldn't Give The Facts.

Would Not "Cook Up" News

When Norman Haggood, editor of Harper's Weekly, made an address before the North Carolina Press Association at Wrightsville Beach last month, he was introduced by Clarence Poe, who referred in his speech of introduction to the fine devotion to duty and high ideals which was shown by Mr. Haggood's refusal to accept one of the highest salaries ever offered an American editor because he could not accept the salary and do the work required without a sacrifice of his own views and beliefs.

Mr. Haggood, in the course of his preliminary remarks, thanked Mr. Poe for the cordial words of introduction and added that he did not deserve as much credit for what he did as deserved for a somewhat similar action a certain young man whom he had in mind. He then recounted the incident of a reporter on the New York American sent to Niagara Falls to report the proceedings of the mediation conference for the Hearst newspapers and of that reporter's throwing up his position because his dispatches were "cooked up" to suit the editorial policy of the Hearst newspapers instead of representing the facts at Niagara as he ascertained them.

It was not known at Wrightsville Beach that Mr. Haggood was referring to Roscoe Mitchell, of North Carolina, a son of the late P. A. Mitchell, of Raleigh, United States Deputy Marshal, and presumably Mr. Haggood did not know this himself as he would probably have alluded to the fact had he known it. But it was the young North Carolinian that he was talking about and last week's Harper's Weekly had the whole story. It was played up in great shape. It was the star article, its name appearing on the cover and there also appearing on the cover a facsimile of one of the telegrams that were exchanged by Mr. Mitchell and the managing editor of the American. The article, which was written by Isaac Russell, follows:

The New York American owned by W. R. Hearst, sent a message to one of its reporters during a critical moment in the progress of peace negotiations at Niagara, "Be resigned without resigning," the message read.

It was dated May 30th. On the morning of that day the Hearst newspapers had published a telegraphic dispatch from Niagara containing what, if true, was most disquieting news. The dispatch stated that the Hearst papers had become aware of the contents of a message sent to the mediators by Carranza. The text of the so-called Carranza message was given in the dispatch in full.

The Hearst reporter then on duty in Niagara was Roscoe Conklin Mitchell. So far as the public could guess the New York American had actually received over the telegraph wires from Niagara a dispatch, part of which was the text of a confidential message to the mediators. Mitchell knew that he had sent no such dispatch to his paper. The telegraph operator knew that he had not transmitted any such dispatch. The mediators knew that they had not received any such message as that printed. Every newspaper man in Niagara who was worthy of the confidence of the American delegates knew that Hearst was faking.

Mitchell resigned from Mr. Hearst's service by telegraph.

The resignation was received in Niagara with joy. Newspaper men who were famous for work in several continents formed themselves into an impromptu committee and rushed in three automobiles to Mitchell's hotel to tell him while he was packing up what a fine stand they thought he had taken, for standards to which Mr. Hearst has not yet risen.

The American delegates even held for Mitchell an impromptu reception, during which Justice Frederick W. Lehmann made a short speech congratulating the reporter.

Thus Mitchell made his exit from Niagara alone, and without a job. From one view-point he had gone there as an agent of all the people who read newspapers, honor bound to transmit news truly. From another, he had gone there as a wage-earner in pursuit of a living, bound in order to hold his job, to transmit to his employer the kind of news his employer wanted.

Mr. Hearst's greatest newspaper trick to force this view upon him. In messages urging him not to resign and in other messages asking him to reconsider his resignation, the newspaper urged him "to be a good soldier and a good boy" and again "to send the news facts and leave the policy to the editors."

"COME HOME COMFORTABLY."

A final message releasing Mitchell urged him to "come home comfortably" and to remember that "good soldiers are patient even if superior officers make mistakes."

I am not writing this story of a newspaper problem in order to glorify a man who has quit his job. I am writing it to invite the public to consider some of the things that go on behind the telegraph wires. As a reporter who has been on the job for ten years I have felt for some time that the public ought to be invited in; that it ought to take a hand.

The case of Mitchell presents the problem in concrete form. Hearst when he employed Mitchell, happened to hire a reporter who was ready to fight for standards which can never be wholly enforced, I believe, until the public takes a hand. The secret of Hearst's Niagara faking is out because Mitchell was a usual Hearst reporter. He was new to Hearst, although old to important departments of journalism.

The first time I saw Mitchell he was on the end of a telephone wire and the home of E. H. Harriman, at Arden, was on the other end. Harriman was lying, according to some reports, and according to others he was already dead. The man on duty as near as they could get to Harriman's home were plainly excited as the climatic point in a big situation was approaching.

MITCHELL'S PASSION FOR FACTS.

I noted Mitchell because he was working at high tension and at the same time was cool. I noticed in what he sent down to his paper a little later, a real reason for cold facts. There were none of the flowery trimmings that other reporters wrote in.

I heard him again a little later. At Oyster Bay, soon after Roosevelt's return from America, yellow newspapers published so much inaccurate matter that the Colonel shut down on their all—save one. Roscoe Mitchell, I heard, was given the privilege of coming to the Colonel's home once a day, and carrying back to the telegraph station at Oyster Bay such news as there was, for distribution, as he saw fit, to other reporters.

I met Mitchell again while we both were assigned to Woodrow Wilson's campaign for the presidency. At Syracuse, while the now well-advertised trap was being set to put Mr. Wilson in a position that would make him appear to be a pleasant companion of Murphy, Mr. Wilson felt compelled to give a confidence of the utmost importance to some one of us. We were together on a porch outside of a club house in which Murphy was already seated at the luncheon table, and Mr. Wilson was momentarily expected to resume a seat which he had abandoned.

WILSON REPOSES CONFIDENCE.

Of the group Mr. Wilson chose

Mitchell as the one in whom to repose his confidence. It was that he wished Mitchell to gather all the reporters party together and keep them ready for an immediate return to the condemner's car in the railroad station. The rest of the confidence was that things were going badly—that Mr. Wilson might at any moment withdraw from the day's proceedings. I was among those told to stand ready for a hurried return to the train. I never knew until the train was on its way back to New York and Mr. Wilson himself took up the theme with the rest of us why it was that one of the reporters had given us such an unusual message.

This bit of background to the Mitchell incident at Niagara is necessary because it will throw some light on the manner in which he was received there.

AT VERA CRUZ.

The last time Mitchell figured in the news before he was sent to Niagara was when American warships were about to depart for Vera Cruz. It became a "newspaper secret" that the Navy Department had refused to take any Hearst man along on a warship. It also became a matter of Park Row discussion that the Hearst executives turned to Roscoe Mitchell, who had recently accepted employment on Hearst's American. Mitchell telephoned to Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, and received a ready permission to join the fleet. Daniels throughout the campaign had been in charge of the publicity section of the Wilson headquarters and knew and could judge Mitchell's work as it had been delivered to other papers.

Mitchell went to Vera Cruz aboard a United States warship and soon after he returned he found that the Hearst newspapers were in another middle with the government departments.

It was important to consider this middle, because it has a bearing on the peculiar personal responsibilities Mitchell assumed at Niagara.

In the Hearst headquarters in New York it became known that the Washington bureau "was all in as to handling the mediation conferences at Niagara, that none of the Washington men were on "speaking terms" with the mediators. More than that, the information conveyed to the home office was to the effect that one of the mediators had torn a Hearst reporter's card up and had thrown the fragments in his face.

TURN TO MITCHELL.

Again the Hearst forces turned to Mitchell. They knew the high esteem in which he was held personally by those who knew him. I am not going to tell here why Mitchell accepted employment from Hearst. That has to do with the experience as a reporter in the capacity unfamiliar to the public—the capacity of a wage-earner working at what on the inside appears a highly sweat-d trade, however much it may appear from the outside to be a noble and romantic profession.

Mitchell on May 19th found himself on his way to Niagara with the information to go on, that none of those connected with the mediation would have anything to do with a Hearst man. He even knew of the incident of the torn-up card.

On the morning of May 20th Supreme Court Justice Lamar and Judge Lehmann, the American delegates, were seated on the porch of the Hotel Prospect, on the American side. Newspaper men known to them to be worthy of their confidence were grouped near them and a general "family chat" was in progress.

Into this chat a young man with a hatched face and a slightly Southern accent projected himself. He went up to Justice Lamar and Judge Lehmann and introduced himself, since none of the reporters there made a move to do so. He told them his name was Mitchell and that he had come to Niagara for Mr. Hearst's New York American.

He joined the party—but there was no further attempt to carry on the conversation that had been interrupted. Reporters and delegates alike seemed conscious of the need for restraint in the presence of a Hearst

GETS SILENCE TREATMENT.

Mitchell left the party after a brief "silence treatment." Just inside the hotel doors he met Robert F. Rose, the attache of the State Department at the negotiations. With Rose the situation was different. He knew Mitchell and the things for which Mitchell stood.

Without any hesitation Rose reversed Mitchell's progress away from the delegation. He forced him back and personally introduced him to the delegates giving at the same time a strong and unequivocal guarantee that the delegates would always find themselves receiving a square deal from his friend and old-time associate. After that Justice Lamar and Judge Lehmann talked in Mitchell's presence, admitting him freely to the informal discussion.

To each of the mediators and to the Mexican delegates Mitchell gave his pledge that he was not responsible for Hearst's editorial policies, that as a reporter he wanted to give the facts of the developments and to give them fairly. He was accepted on that basis, and was given respectful and adequate hearings when he came for news. Then the trouble began.

STICKS TO THE FACTS.

Mitchell filed a dispatch giving the actual developments. He was hopeful in tone, since the mood of all concerned was optimistic. Next day Mitchell bought a Hearst paper. Not a word of his dispatch was in the paper. But the Niagara date line was there just the same. No person on the ground could possibly have written, with any regard for the facts, the story that appeared. It was a Hearst story—simmering with insinuations that President Wilson was backing down and yielding. In a humiliating manner to each demand upon him.

The issue for Hearst's man at Niagara was interesting to himself, to all the other reporters and to Mr. Rose who knew him. He had made personal pledges; and he had been received on those pledges.

The Hearst home office was not to aim an instrument through which he could force over to the public at large from Niagara a trained man's observations and views about a matter of critical national moment. The chief Hearst paper was not a paper that the reader could pick up with any assurance that a dispatch dated at Niagara than the desk of some writer in the Hearst offices.

Other reporters, whose papers permitted them to serve the public honest news, looked upon Mitchell's plight with mingled feelings. They all knew, of course, what had happened for they had been in the telegraph office while Mitchell was writing, alongside themselves, and in the questions passing back and forth they had become well aware of the general nature of Mitchell's dispatch.

HOME COOKING SHOWS.

The offense of the first day was not the end. As the Hearst papers would continue to arrive the dispatch from Niagara would continue to show evidence of home-cooking in the American office. Some of it would be genuine and then there would be whole paragraphs of inserted material, cleverly designed to give an appearance of trouble in the mediation proceedings and shameful concessions on the part of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan.

Mitchell made explanations to the American delegates and the mediators at first. He tried to square his personal pledges with the results, by pointing out what portions of the daily Niagara dispatch were his and what portions had never been sent by him.

It is not an easy thing to go into voluntary martyrdom, although those who do not have to make the journey may think it is. Mitchell was thinking of it. I don't know what, during the few days he continued to fight the issue out with the Hearst executives. But I do know that he has children in school and that the jobs for one earning a wage at his particular trade are rather far apart and not easy to obtain.

Mitchell sent protests to the Hearst executives with apparent success, for he announced to his fellow reporters

ROSCOE MITCHELL RESIGNS. Continued on Page 3. that he had been assured by telegraph that there would be no more interference with his dispatches. Alfred Henry Lewis began to write Niagara dispatches—but he signed them himself, and Mitchell exhibited signs of relief from responsibility. But Lewis went away in a few days, and the dispatches from Niagara, for which Mitchell became again responsible to the source of the news, began once more to be breaking up with interpolations. It was a case, again, of giving Hearst what he wanted.

MORE PROTESTS AND THE RESPONSE.

There were more protests from Mitchell and a response in the form of the appearance in Niagara Falls of another member of the Hearst staff. He had worked for Hearst for several years longer than Mitchell. He had become somewhat famous to Hearst readers as the author of stories "foating" Dorothy Arnold at plausible places in New York.

The new Hearst recruit at Niagara explained that he had come "merely to help Mitchell since there was work enough for two men." But nobody was deceived by the subterfuge.

There was work only enough for one man—if honestly collecting the news was what was meant by "work." But if Mr. Hearst demanded something beside straight news, and his man on the ground was resolutely refusing to distort the news to furnish it, then there was work for two men. The corps of correspondents so interpreted the situation. So did Mitchell. So did the American delegates to the mediation conference.

About this time copies of the Hearst papers arrived with the "full text of the Carranza message." The "full text" appeared in the midst of a genuine dispatch bearing a Niagara Falls date line. From all appearances it was as genuine as the rest of the dispatch.

Reporters and the American delegates were talking together at the Hotel Prospect when Mr. Mitchell appeared, bearing a copy of his paper. Of course, if the text were genuine, an important beat was to be registered against all of the other reporters.

Mitchell went directly to Judge Lehman, to whom he had given his personal pledge upon his arrival, that he would deal squarely with the news.

"I do not want to ask you, Judge," said Hearst's reporter. "If this Carranza message is genuine or not, I merely want to notify you and the others who gave me their confidence when I came here that this part of my dispatch did not go out over the wire from Niagara, and was not part of my dispatch. I never saw it until I found it in my dispatch upon reading the paper."

A NEW KIND OF REBELLION.

Mitchell followed this report to those who had confided in him with a message to his paper. The message demanded that he be withdrawn from Niagara.

In the Hearst office this evidently was a new kind of rebellion. Bradford Merrill, the managing editor, took the matter up with Mitchell by telegraph.

Of course, as a wage-earner and employed hand, Mitchell had obligations to his employer. He had other obligations to the men to whom he had pledged his word as a gentleman in order to gain access to the genuine news originating at Niagara. He chose to call into his confidence some of the older correspondents; and so it came about that his hot-fire of telegrams between himself and his office became known to this group of correspondents, and through them to the American delegates. On all sides interest in the situation was heightened by the consciousness that a new standard for reportorial conduct was being fought for at a tremendous personal cost to the fighter.

The response to Mitchell's demand that he be withdrawn from Niagara was this:

New York, May 30, 1914.
Roscoe C. Mitchell,
Clifton Hotel, N. Falls,
All right. Please come home to-night. Always send the news facts and leave policy to editors. Show Mr. Johnson.

Bradford Merrill.

To this message Mitchell replied that he would introduce the reporter sent to "help" him to the other reporters—but not to the American delegates or the mediators. He added that upon his arrival in the Hearst office his resignation would take effect.

The Hearst executives must have been startled. Niagara received this:

New York, May 30, 1914.
Roscoe C. Mitchell,
Clifton Hotel, N. Falls,
Why resign without cause? We should greatly regret it. Please be good soldier and good boy.
Bradford Merrill.

RESIGNATION NOT WITHOUT CAUSE.

But Mitchell and other correspondents in Niagara thought that the resignation decidedly had "cause." Mitchell tried to make clear to the managing editor of the Hearst newspaper, for whom he had the highest regard, what this cause was. He wired that "I know my information has been authentic" and he referred to his former protests against "the daily inaccurate inserts."

The good heart of the Hearst manager rose, seemingly, above the official demands of his position. He sent this final message:

New York, May 30, 1914.
Roscoe C. Mitchell,
Clifton Hotel, N. Falls,
Come home comfortably. Be philosophical. Mr. Hearst sent Johnson. No reflection on you. Good soldiers are patient even if superior officers make mistakes. Be resigned without resigning.
Merrill.

Before Mr. Hearst's downcast reporter left Niagara Falls he received in confidence the information that the alleged Carranza message which had been inserted by Hearst into his dispatch, as if it had been an actual existence in Niagara, was an utter fake. How great a fake it actually was came out ten days later when the genuine text of the Carranza message became public for the first time.

And there, Average Reader of the newspapers, you have a reportorial problem to which your notice is respectfully invited.

Is it better to leave it to the men on the firing line, the Mitchells, to fight out alone the question of whether you are to receive accurate information concerning what is going on in the world or to endeavor to discover some means whereby both you and your agent, the reporter, may be less at the mercy of the publisher who chooses to be unscrupulous when lying and misrepresentation will serve his personal ends?

(Editor's Note—Roscoe Mitchell is an old Alamance County boy, son of Palo A. Mitchell, who was Register of Deeds for a number of years and was one of the best officials who ever held office in Alamance County. Mr. Mitchell was a good man and well-liked by everybody but to those who remember Roscoe, this will sound like a fish story.)

GOVERNOR CRAIG RETURNS.

Governor Craig Says He Will Recommend that the State Purchase the Peaks.

Asheville, July 23.—Governor Craig and party, who went to Black Mountain Monday morning and thence to the summit of Mt. Mitchell returned to the city last night and all express themselves as having enjoyed the most delightful outings of their lives. The Governor took occasion while on this trip to examine the boundary along the summit of Mitchell and the surrounding peaks, that he will recommend for purchase by the State in order to conserve the natural beauty of the peaks and their value to the section as a watershed.

When seen by a reporter this morning Governor Craig stated that he does not know the exact acreage of the boundary which he thinks should be purchased by the State but estimates it to be approximately 500 acres. This boundary includes the summits of all peaks from Potato Top, over to Clingman's Dome to Mitchell's peak. If the logging operations carried on along the slopes of these mountains should be extended to the very summits, Governor Craig feels that the loss to the section would be irreparable, and he will do all in his power to have the State purchase the boundary referred to.

Those who accompanied the Governor on this outing were: Dr. George T. Winston, Major and Mrs. Whiteford G. Smith, Mrs. W. V. Moore, Miss Faurine Moore, C. A. Webb, George W. Craig and Stanford Webb. Messrs. Perley and Crockett were most courteous to the party in furnishing a special car for them; the logging road, which extends within a few thousand feet of the summit of Mt. Mitchell.

Each member of the party who has expressed an opinion about the scenery said that the scenery along this railway is the most magnificent they have ever had the pleasure of viewing. This view is also expressed by Dr. Winston, who has traveled practically all over the sphere.

There has been considerable talk for some time that the lumber company will eventually put on a passenger service on their logging road, and one member of Governor Craig's party stated today that such a service will be inaugurated before next summer. He gathered this impression from conversations with those in charge of the operations. The company has recently purchased three new locomotives and it is believed that they will arrange shortly for passenger coaches and put on a regular schedule for passenger traffic to the summit of Mt. Mitchell—or rather to the end of the line.

The party was entertained Tuesday night on the summit of the mountain by J. W. Dunn, proprietor of the Log Cabin Inn. Governor Craig stated this morning that the accommodations afforded were very comfortable and added greatly to the pleasure of the trip.

Bubonic Plague Claims Another Victim in New Orleans.

New Orleans, July 23.—Bubonic plague claimed its fourth victim here today. The death occurred at the same address from which Helen Seell, aged 10, developed the disease last Saturday and the victim was the child's grandmother, Regina Schmidt, aged 73.

The woman became ill July 20 and she was listed as a plague suspect. She suffered from the septicoemic type. This is considered more dangerous than the bubonic type which has affected each of the other eight cases.

WOMEN'S WOES.

Burlington Women Are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pain that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Keeping the kidneys well has spared thousands of women much misery. Read of a remedy for kidney ills only that is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. P. King, 1016 Dixie St., Burlington, N. C., says: "I had nervous headaches, my back hurt me and I had pains when I lifted anything. The kidney action was quite irregular. Doan's Kidney Pills removed this trouble and made my back strong."

Mrs. King is only one of many Burlington people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—If your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. King had—the remedy backed by honest testimony. 50c. all stores. DOING THEIR DUTY.

To filter the blood is the kidney's duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are weak.

Backache and other kidney ills may follow.

Help the kidneys do their work.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills—the tested kidney remedy.

Proof of their worth in the following:

N. Foster, shoemaker, Mill Street, Graham, N. C., says: "I am never without Doan's Kidney Pills in the house. I know that they are the best kidney remedy to be had. I was rheumatic. My joints and back were stiff and lame and my kidneys acted irregularly. The kidney secretions contained sediment and were painful in passage. Finally, I took Doan's Kidney Pills and they did me more good than anything else I had ever used."

The above is not an isolated case. Mr. Foster is only one of many in this vicinity who have gratefully endorsed Doan's. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Foster had. 50c. all stores. Our plate was furnished a thrilling lot of excitement for an hour or so this morning. The stirring scene was made up of two young mules, a wagon loaded with stove wood, an overturned hive of angry bees, and a crowd of helpers. Kicking mules, stinging bees, flying wood, and general excitement added to the joys of the moment. The scene was staged in front of the postoffice, thence by Swift's store, on by C. T. M. Clapp's residence, through a tennis wire netting, over a wire fence, and on to the west. The July day was hot, the bees were hot, the mules were hot, and the picture was painted in warm colors for a short time.

A Swede was being examined in a case where the defendant was accused of breaking a plate glass window with a large stone, says The Los Angeles Examiner. He was pressed to tell how big the stone was, but he could not explain.

"Was it as big as my fist?" asked the judge, who had taken over the examination from the lawyers in the hope of getting some results.

"It ban bigger," the Swede replied. "Was it as big as my two fists?"

"It ban bigger." "Was it as big as my head?" "It ban about as long, but not so thick," replied the Swede, amid the laughter of the court.

Great and Trying Load Removed from Democrats.

Washington, July 25.—The withdrawal of T. D. Jones, nominated by the President for the Federal Reserve Board, removes a great and trying load from many a Democratic Senator who wanted to stand by the appointment of the President but feared the wrath of trust-hating constituents. There has been no question as to the character, integrity or ability of Mr. Jones but many Democrats questioned the wisdom of naming a director of the Harvester Trust—now in court to defend a suit brought against it under the Sherman law—for the Federal Reserve Board.

The fight on Jones was terrific. Senators Reed of Missouri and Hitchcock, of Nebraska, two independent Democrats, led the opposition, and made it possible for the Republicans of the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate to bring out an unfavorable report against Jones.

Senators Overman and Simmons were going to vote for the confirmation of Jones. They had said so to the President. Senator Overman told me weeks ago that Jones should withdraw for the sake of party harmony. Senator Simmons thinks that Jones took the proper course under the circumstances.

It became apparent two or three days ago that Jones would be defeated if his nomination was brought to a show down in the Senate. Four Democrats, Senators Reed, Hitchcock, Lane, of Oregon, and Vardaman, of Mississippi, were unalterably opposed to him. Several other Senators were determined not to vote for him, although they might not have voted against him. Thus, the matter stood when the President withdrew the nomination.

The dropping of Jones is not considered a defeat for the President, yet it almost amounts to that.—H. E. C. Bryant in Charlotte Observer.

TWO BANDITS HOLD UP TRAIN.

Hold-Up Occurred Late Last Night 3 Miles From New Orleans on L. & N.—Only About $20 in Loot.

New Orleans, July 24.—Twenty dollars and 25 cents was secured by two masked bandits who tonight shot and killed Tom Elgin, a flagman in an attempt to hold up the New Orleans Limited, a fast through passenger train on the L. & N. Railway, at Gentilly, a small station three miles east of here.

According to the statement of conductor E. C. Potter, the bandits boarded the train at New Orleans and very shortly after passing Gentilly pulled the train slow down and the conductor began an investigation.

One of the robbers threw a revolver into the conductor's face and then proceeded to go through his pockets obtaining $18.75. A representative of a New Orleans transfer company was next robbed of $3.50. At this juncture the porter came up and was fired on by the robbers, the bullet striking the flagman, who was just behind the porter.

The highwaymen then jumped from the train, one of them leaving behind the mask he had worn. They have not been apprehended late tonight.

A special train carrying officers and physicians left here shortly after 11 o'clock for Gentilly, reports having reached this city that the express and mail clerks were missing. Later reports from Bay St. Louis stated that the clerks were found on the train when it reached that place. The body of flagman Elgin will be brought back to New Orleans on the next train and tomorrow will be conveyed to his home at Ocean Springs, Miss., for burial.

SEARCHING FOR WESTERN BANDITS.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 24.—Deputy sheriffs searched the hills north of Los Angeles today for bandits who boarded train No. 22 of the Southern Pacific Company, last night and robbed passengers in two cars of $337 at Chatsworth Park. The men did the work of robbing the passengers, but a third man who appeared from the smoking car as the two boarded the train is believed to have been an accomplice.

The bandits dropped from the train as it slowed up at Hewitt, a small station about ten miles north of Los Angeles.

Is South Carolina Fit for Self-Government?

Some days ago the Governor of South Carolina, in explaining why he had pardoned a certain prisoner, said that a prominent physician of that State has pronounced the prisoner's case paralysis. The doctor denied that that was what he had said, to the embarrassment of the Governor. Five nights later the doctor was shot from ambush. As it happened, he was only slightly wounded, but the intention of the assassin is evident from the fact that he shouted as he ran that the doctor would not trouble "Coolly" and more.

Down in Mexico a man who agrees with the powers that be stands with his back to a wall and is shot by a firing squad. The South Carolina system, whereby such men are shot from the dark, is a trifle better in that the victim, as in this case sometimes escapes. There is no reason to believe that Bleese sent this particular assassin with orders to kill the doctor; but there is every reason to believe that if the bravo is captured and sentenced he will be pardoned if Bleese, or a Bleese tool, is governor. In so far as men like Doctor McIntosh are concerned, he might as well hire his hands of braves in the first place. Whether his murderer is hired before the event, or receives his pay in the form of a pardon afterward, matters not at all to the dead man.

Because of the Mexican custom we have declared that that nation is not fit for self-government. How much more fit is South Carolina?—Greensboro News.

VILLA IS FOR PEACE NOW.

Doubts Over Villa's Attitude Quiet When Word Came from Him to Washington Officials.

Washington, July 24.—Official advices today revealed that the Washington administration was meeting with success in bringing Provisional President Carranza, General Carranza, General Villa and General Zapata into harmony for the restoration of peace in Mexico.

From these four leaders—representing all the factors concerned in the establishment of a stable government—came encouraging messages in answer to the counsel and advice which the United States has been lending to smooth the way to a complete agreement.

General Zapata promised to cooperate with the Constitutionalists in the work of pacification. Two emissaries from General Carranza to General Zapata are due in Vera Cruz tomorrow and will explain to Zapata the concessions and reforms planned by Carranza. Officials were confident an amicable understanding would be reached.

General Carranza through the American consuls accompanying him indicated he would make satisfactory arrangements concerning the amnesty and guarantees desired by the Carranza government.

Carranza arrived at Tampico today. While there he will meet Reginaldo Cepeda who has been authorized by Provisional President Carranza to make preliminary arrangements for the transfer of the government to the Constitutionalists.

Provisional President Carranza, himself, sent for the Brazilian minister who is caring for the interests of the United States in Mexico, and asked him to inform the Washington government that he and his associates wanted no share in the new administration but simply an amnesty and guarantee for the property of all Mexicans regardless of political affiliation. Mr. Carranza's statement was transmitted today to American Consul Silliman, to assist in preparing the way for the forthcoming peace conferences.

Doubts which officials had expected over Villa's attitude also were quieted today when word came from him that he would do all in his power to restore peace in Mexico and would unite with the other constitutionalist leaders toward that common purpose. Villa's message was sent in response to the personal appeal of the Washington government.

A message was received today from Charge Clause of the French embassy, who informed Secretary Bryan that an investigation by agents of the French government, completely exonerated Villa from personal blame in connection with the killing at Zacatecas recently of two French citizens.

General Carranza has given assurances that those responsible for the death of the Frenchmen will be punished. This incident and other foreign complications, officials think, will be adjusted as soon as a transfer of government is effected in Mexico City.

While Carranza has announced that he would repudiate debts of the Huerta government the United States will endeavor to obtain an equitable settlement when a stable government is established. At present much interest is manifest in the investigation being conducted by Provisional President Carranza into the financial transactions of the Huerta administration.

DURHAM HOTELS NOT IN LIQUOR BUSINESS.

Durham Prosecuting Attorney Makes Reply to Letter From Virginia Man on the Subject.

Durham, July 24.—A letter in which a Virginia prohibitionist asks if it is true that there is a bar room in one of the Durham hotels, where a man can pay for a drink in one room and have it served in another, was received by Prosecuting Attorney Chas. Scarlett this morning and caused something of a sensation in official circles of the city.

The letter was written to Governor Craig by T. H. Lyon, of Chester, Va. Governor Craig's secretary forwarded the letter to Solicitor Gattis, who sent it to the prosecutor of the Recorder's Court. The letter follows:

Chester, Va., July 21, 1914. Governor Craig.

Raleigh, N. C. I understand that whiskey is sold in the hotels of Durham, N. C.; that one can go into a separate room, pay for the whiskey and then go to the bar and get it. Will you please let me know if this is true? It is told here to prove that prohibition is a failure in North Carolina. I will feel much honored by your reply.

Yours respectfully, T. H. LYON.

This letter was sent to Solicitor Gattis, of Hillsboro, and he turned it over to the local authorities for a reply. Mr. Scarlett has written the Chester, Va., man the following letter in reply to his inquiry:

"In reply will say that I am prosecuting attorney of the Recorder's Court of Durham; that I know every man in town who is suspected of selling whiskey; that I know every place that is suspected of selling whiskey, and can say unequivocally that the statement that our hotels are selling whiskey is a premeditated lie on the part of the man who circulated it."

North Carolina's Part of the Fund is Raised.

Washington, July 24.—Before leaving for home tonight A. W. McLean, acting national committeeman for North Carolina, stated that he had succeeded in raising practically all of North Carolina's portion of the fund to carry on the organization work of the party. Mr. McLean was asked to raise about $2,000 and he has all of that amount with the exception of $100. He does not anticipate any trouble in collecting this small amount.

J. P. Swanton, of Virginia, and W. L. Clements have been made directors of the Gold Hill Consolidated Co., according to W. G. Newman, who stopped over here for a few minutes today. Mr. Swanton is a brother of Senator Swanton, of Virginia.

C. S. Webb, of Greenville, S. C., a brother of Representative Webb, is here with his brother. Mr. Webb says Cole Blaise is a "licked man" and that Senator Smith will be returned to the Senate.

Begins to look a good deal as if that one share in the harvester trust will turn out a bad investment for Tom Jones.—Greensboro News.

J. R. Thomas Horse a Winner.

Wilmington, Del., July 23.—In the racing here today in one of the chief events on the board the horse of J. R. Thomas, of Greensboro, N. C., won second money, notwithstanding the fact that the animal was taken sick during the race. Mr. Thomas horse was driven by Reeves, of Winston-Salem.

Representative McDermott avers that "They can't beat me in my own district because the machine is for me and I am part of the machine." That is not necessarily a permanently solid line of reasoning, even in Chicago.—Greensboro News.

The Triumphal Entry

MARK 11:1-11.

1 And when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,

2 And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him.

3 And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

4 And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door within a place where two ways met; and they loose him.

5 And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt?

6 And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

7 And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him.

8 And many strewed their garments in the way; and others cut down branches off the trees, and strewed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

10 Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.

11 And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the eventide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

GOLDEN TEXT.

"Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee." (Zech. 9:9.)

BEHOLD, THY KING COMETH!

Our Sunday school lessons for the year have presented a wonderful picture of Jesus the Son of Man. We have seen him moving about the country with his little band of intimate followers, quickening their spirits by his unequalled life and transforming them little by little into the pattern of his own simple greatness. He has taught the multitude the lasting truths of the kingdom of heaven, cured the physical, mental and moral ills which held them in subjection, and has made them familiar with the high attainments of the spiritual life involved in prayer, trust, obedience, and love of the Father in heaven. During the years of his public ministry our Lord met the people face to face; and as a man among men he shared their sorrows, took their burdens upon his own heart, and suffered all the limitations of their humanity. He entered into human life as he found it in Galilee and Judea, and gave out the unlimited nobility and greatness of his own life to draw them into the perfect life they were able to live. As the Father he was the Lord of life and every man's Redeemer; and because he was greater than man he encouraged the confidence of men in him as the Son of God, the Anointed King of the whole human race. A brief glimpse of his glory is given us in the lesson before us today.

APPROACHING THE CITY.

Slightly less than two miles from Jerusalem, on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, is the little village of Bethany. It is now a small Moslem settlement of about forty families, and is now, as in the days of Jesus, the largest place between Jericho and the Holy City. The Mount of Olives shuts out entirely the view of the city; and in its seclusion and quiet life it suggests nothing of the busy rush and excitement of the Jewish capital, just fifteen furlongs off. It is easy to understand why our Lord loved to go to this quiet retreat at night after his days of exacting labors during the Passover week.

Concerning Bethphage nothing definite is known, except that it was near Bethany, on the Mount of Olives. The name signifies "the house of figs," and some scholars have conjectured that tents of branches and leaves were erected here to accommodate the crowds that could not find entertainment in Jerusalem during the great week of the Passover celebration.

In the neighborhood of these villages Jesus rested on his journey up from Jericho and made final preparations for his entry into Jerusalem. He prepared to enter the capital city of the Jews, not as a private teacher from Galilee, but as a conquering hero returning in triumph. He sent two of his disciples into another little village to bring a young ass which had never been ridden, telling them to say to the owners of the ass that the Master needed him and would send back the animal when his mission with him had been performed. It is worthy of notice that six verses out of the eleven which compose our lesson are devoted to this preliminary work. This is a clear indication of the deliberate preparation for the entry into the city.

FULFILLING A PROPHECY.

Jesus did not explain his entire purpose to the disciples, but the Church afterwards understood it, and Matthew and John both give the explanation of it. See Matthew 21, 4, 5 and John 12:15. An ancient prophecy in Zechariah (9:9) and Isaiah (62:11) had declared, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass," and also, "Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him." The prophets saw in a vision the glory of the Lord's Anointed and proclaimed his entrance into the city as the coming of a conqueror, but peaceful and lowly in heart. Riding an ass was considered by the people and the prophets as more stately than walking and less warlike than riding a horse. Jesus gave a dramatic interpretation of the prophecy; he entered as a King bringing salvation, peaceful and loving, without a trail of bloodshed and woe behind him. His kingdom bears these unerring marks; his rule is the power of love, not the power of sword and strategy.

THE ENTHUSIASM OF THE CROWD.

The ancient prophets had exhorted the multitudes to rejoice and shout at the coming of the King of salvation, and there is nothing in all the world more worthy of overflowing praise and joy of human hearts than the entrance of the King who brings peace and good will. The multitude unconsciously entered into the spirit of that prophecy when Jesus rode the ass from Bethany to Jerusalem. The disciples entered into the spirit of that joy when they saw clearly that their Master, self-sacrificing, meek, without political ambition, was about to enter that city as the Christ, the Messiah, the One whom the prophets foretold. The multitude, gathered from all parts of the Jewish world, re-echoed that joy when they beheld the King of salvation, whom through long years they had hoped to see, riding upon an ass. They spread their garments on the road, cut branches off the trees and scattered them for the ass to walk upon. They cried in answering refrain: "Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest." This praise to the Messiah, the Son of God, Jesus accepted as his own due and made it clear by every token that he was receiving from the hearts of the people what it was right for him to claim.

For one brief day the multitudes rejoiced because the promise of God had come true and their Lord and Savior was in their midst. Then the shadows fell. Before another week had passed even the disciples forsook Him whom now they hailed as the Son of God. But the shadows passed, and the day of full salvation dawned; and in the light of that day the whole world is now turning with praise to Him that cometh in the name of the Lord, bringing salvation.

There is nothing more becoming in any wise man than to make choice of friends, for by them thou shalt be judged as they art; let them therefore be wise and virtuous and none of those that follow thee for gain; but make election rather of thy betters than thy inferiors, shunning always such as are ready, for if thou givest twenty gifts, and refuse to do the like but once, all that thou hast done will be lost, and such men will become thy mortal enemies.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

We are sure the cause of justice would be finely served by putting E. J. at the head of the federal legal establishment—and not well that we means justice with a small j.—The Greensboro News.

We should not be surprised, any fine morning now, to see the Charlotte Observer give its indorsement, almost unqualified, to the taxation amendment, which is offered to the people with the most earnest recommendation of a Democratic legislature, and is the work of the ablest body of men that legislature could select.—Greensboro News.

Protracted meeting is now going on at Bethel Church. The Children's Day exercises were held Sunday, 26, and were thoroughly enjoyed.
Protracted meeting will begin at Stoney Creek Church Sunday, August 2. The members of the Church and all who have friends buried in the cemetery there, are requested to meet Thursday July 30 and help clean off the church yard and grave yard. Come out and show that much respect for the church and the departed friends and loved ones.
Thanks to Robert Foster for nice grapes—they were very fine.
Ed. Blanchard, the clever sub for No. 5, says that preaching does his dog no good. Not worth the money. Ask him about it. It is worse than killing guineas.
We stopped, as is our annual custom, with J. H. Ross for dinner on last Friday. We never miss a wheat-threshing there if we can help it.
Thanks for nice vegetables we found in Jule Mansfield's box. Jule is all right, only a little ugly.

No. 7 News Items.
There was a big social gathering at Mr. J. J. Bishop's last Saturday evening from eight to eleven o'clock at which most all the families of the neighborhood were represented. The social evening was given in honor of Mr. Bishop's brother, Mr. Nathan Bishop, of Nebraska, and his wife. Mr. Bishop came in about three weeks ago and met this lady, Mrs. Blaylock, of Danville, Va., who was his sweetheart in his boyhood days, who was then a Miss Emerson, of Chatham County. Mr. Bishop was in here on a visit two years ago—after a leave of forty years, at this time he learned where Mrs. Blaylock was living, with her daughter and after his wife died he began a correspondence with this lady which led to the climax of their marriage, two weeks ago. They are both sixty-three years old but seem none the less happy for their old age. After spending about three months here visiting relatives and friends on their honeymoon and perhaps their last visit here, they then expect to go to Nebraska to make their home and Mr. Bishop is happy to take back with him a North Carolina lady. At the social mentioned above ice cream was served very abundantly as a refreshment and the splendid music rendered by graphophones and stringed instruments furnished good entertainment until eleven, when the ninety people having spent a very pleasant evening with the bride and groom, each other sought their different ways home.
Esquire W. A. Timin officiated at the marriage ceremony for Mr. Timothy C. Isley and Miss Robert Alexander last Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock. We wish them a long and happy life.

Domestic Diplomacy.
Mrs. Briggs is so good-looking Mr. Briggs seldom finds it in his heart to be angry with her, but he was really cross when she returned from Florida, according to The Kansas City Star.
"I understand," he said, "that you passed yourself off as a widow while you were away. How about it?"
She admitted it.
"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," said Briggs, "but I suppose you are not."
"Of course I am not," said Mrs. Briggs serenely. "I only did it on Johnny's account. I wanted him to have a good time, and he had it. You have no idea how kind all the men were to him."
